Donna Eaton
Award Winning Photographer and Instructor

Donna Eaton is a professional photographer and North Carolina native now living in the Upstate of South Carolina. She spent eleven years as the staff photographer for a raptor rehabilitation and education center located in North Carolina before venturing out on her own.

Her passion is nature photography, seeing with her heart through her camera and sharing it with others. Donna's photography has won both National and International awards.

She has conducted workshops both on her own and with Popular Photography and North American Nature Photographers Association (NANPA). Donna is an instructor on the Perfect Picture School of Photography (www.ppsop.com) and is an active member of Carolinas' Nature Photographers Association (CNPA) and a popular guest speaker. Her work is represented by Fogstock and Getty Images.

Donna J Eaton Donna Eaton is a professional photographer and North Carolina native now living on 6 acres in the Upstate of South Carolina. She spent eleven years as the staff photographer for a raptor rehabilitation and education center located in North Carolina before venturing out on her own as a professional photographer. Her passion is seeing with her heart through her camera and sharing it with others. Her hope is that her photography will touch people and help spread the message of conservation. A comment from one editor "Donna's dedication to extraordinary photography will serve to inspire millions of people worldwide. Her photographs will truly make a difference in the way the public sees and enjoys nature."
